The seductively fluid quality of the movement in this Trisha Brown masterpiece, juxtaposed with the unpredictable geometric style has become the hallmark of Ms. Brown's work. Performed to a driving score by Laurie Anderson, the exploration of visibility and invisibility is reflected in the translucent costumes and set by Robert Rauschenberg. "... a sigh-inducing mix of cool and gorgeous." - NY Times

Foray Forêt features gold costumes and an open stage. This piece marks the beginning of Ms. Brown's elegant and mysterious Back to Zero cycle, in which she pulled back from external virtuosity to investigate unconscious movement.

This is the final piece in Brown's jazz trilogy. It reveals an intricate world of counterpoint between one dancer and the Company and the frenetic energy of the movement. Whether engaged in bold unison phrases or catapulting off each other through the air, the dancers create a captivating environment, at once easy-going and vitally expressive set to Dave Douglas's jazz score.

"The presentation of Ballet was inspired by the company’s discovery (and preservation) of a series of color slides and a six-minute color film. Ballet is an important precursor to the iconic Man Walking Down the Side of a Building. Ballet is an ironic commentary on the traditional tightrope walk and on the codified language of ballet, (a long standing target of experimental choreographers working in the 1960s). Ballet also indulges in a distinctly feminine romanticism associated with the pink tulle tutu costume, the focus of several richly colored close-up film images." - Susan Rosenberg, Consulting Historical Scholar.

A precursor to Lateral Pass, Working Title is one of Brown’s early explorations of suspended bodies, featuring eight dancers in new colorful costumes by Elizabeth Cannon. "Working Title went on to be a resource for years... broken patterns, making a traveling phrase... I was thinking of my childhood (when I ran through the forest over) moss and mud and hardwood and rotten wood. If you’re going fast, you just have to pick where you place your feet." - Trisha Brown

"Created through improvisation, Pamplona Stones marked a significant departure from her working methods... the self-imposed strictures of her 1970s works. Harkening back to a 1960s aesthetics, Pamplona Stones is performed in everyday clothes and uses props (a mattress, a chair, rocks and a suspended textile) in a seemingly innocent child’s game where movement and language are juxtaposed, and deadpan humor emerges from a combination of imagery and physical/linguistic artistry." - Susan Rosenberg, Consulting Historical Scholar.
TRISHA BROWN: IN PLAIN SITE

Trisha Brown: In Plain Site pairs indoor and outdoor sites with select pieces from Brown’s repertory. Each work is restaged in a dynamic relationship to the setting, amplifying Trisha Brown’s effortless affinity for naturalizing movement to the physical environment.

Ever a resourceful and dexterous innovator, Brown “...said she felt sorry for spaces that weren’t center stage—the ceiling, walls, corners, and wing space. Not to mention trees, lakes, and firehouses,” Wendy Perron recently wrote in Dance Magazine. “She caused a revolution by... turning to the spaces that other dance-makers don’t.” In parks, museums, and public squares, among other sites, audiences are engaged in the intimate, up-close experience of Brown’s choreography through specially chosen excerpts from the repertory.
